

Elite Route To Pro Ranks

Ever dreamt of making your living from playing golf? There's one golfing academy that says it can help you realise those lofty ambitions.

"It is our aim to create a multi cultural learning environment for talented, young golfers who harbour ambitions of becoming professional golfers," said Jonathan Wallett (pictured), a director of Elite Coaching Golf Academy.

"Discipline, determination, desire and dedication are skills that you are not born with, but skills that you learn and develop, just like the golf swing. If you want to be a champion, you have to acquire these skills."

Unlike many golf academies, coaching strategy for each student focuses on all areas of the game – technique, mental, management, and physical conditioning.

From November to April, the academy is based at Royal Pines Resort in Australia, while from May to October the exclusive Gstaad Golf Club in Switzerland is the base.

Students at Royal Pines will also have the opportunity to spend some time at the Australian Institute of Sport at Moonah Links, an outstanding learning facility, coupled with a top links.

The academy also makes use of the latest technology with SAM Putting Lab, as used by the David Leadbetter Golf Academy, and GASP Swing analysis together with a physiology programme by the Australian Institute of Sport's Ramsay McMaster.

"We provide a learning environment where each golfer is treated as an individual, and each student's individual talents are recognised and developed so that they can fulfill their potential," said Wallett, who formerly worked alongside leading European coach Denis Pugh and also spent two years with Sporting Bodymind sports psychology consultancy.

For further details, visit www.elitecoaching.com